Jonathan R. Marz

Partner

Jonathan R. Marz is a partner at Diepenbrock Elkin Gleason LLP, focusing on construction, government contracts, and business litigation.

In his construction and government contracts practices, Mr. Marz represents prime contractors, subcontractors, and other public and private entities in all phases of construction, from bidding and pre-construction through contract close-out. In his litigation practice, Mr. Marz represents contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, and owners in complex construction cases involving, among other issues, construction delay and/or acceleration claims; claims involving extra work and construction defects; and public contracting bid disputes.

In Mr. Marz's extensive business litigation practice, he counsels and represents clients in disputes including and involving contracts; trade secrets; unfair competition; covenants not to compete; and other business disputes and torts.

Mr. Marz also has significant experience in matters and disputes involving the procurement, use, and development of land, as well as environmental issues.
